Are We “Posthuman”?

The Cyborg as Literary Metaphor and Social Actuality

Professor
N. Katherine Hayles

University of California, Los Angeles

Dr. N. Katherine Hayles is Professor of English at the University of California, Los Angeles. In addition to an M.S. in Chemistry from the California Institute of Technology, her other advanced degrees are in the field of English literature: an M.A. from Michigan State University and a Ph.D. from the University of Rochester. Before joining UCLA in 1992, Dr. Hayles taught at the University of Iowa, Dartmouth College, California Institute of Technology, and the University of Missouri-Rolla. Her many academic honours include fellowships from the Guggenheim Foundation, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. She has written many articles on the relationship of science, literature, and critical theory, as well as on science fiction and cybernetics. She is the author of the Cosmic Web: Scientific Field Models and Literary Strategies in the Twentieth Century (1984) and Chaos Bound: Orderly Disorder in Contemporary Literature and Science (1990), both published by Cornell University Press, and editor of the essay collection Chaos and Order: Complex Dynamics in Literature and Science (University of Chicago Press, 1991). Dr. Hayles serves as advisory editor and editorial board member for Modern Fiction Studies, Science-Fiction Studies, and other scholarly journals, and is president of the Society for Literature and Science.
